

Alona is DryGair's Business Development manager. In charge of the international cooperation and business partnerships, she promotes government's support and regulation and manages DryGair's projects worldwide. She has over 15 years experience in company valuation, building financial models, and preparing business plans. She specializes in economic analysis of companies, potential projects, and markets. She also teaches in the Hebrew University of Jerusalem.