

Dr. Rakefet David-Schwartz is a researcher at the Agriculture Research Organization, Volcani Center. She obtained her Ph.D. from the Weizmann Institute of Science. Her main area of research focuses on molecular, anatomical and physiological aspects of tree growth in Israeli forests. She is currently studying parameters for use in selecting adaptive genotypes for future reforestation under observed and projected climate change.